INTERNSHIPS

If you think that a college diploma is all you need to find a job, you need to rethink your plans right now. Your search will bring you to a harsh reality ... it's difficult to get a good job without experience in a particular field, and you can't get experience until you've had a job or internship. In addition to practical "real world" experience, internships provide many other important benefits.

The value of an internship:

I - Increase your marketability. Research has shown that students who have participated in an internship are more than 60% more likely to have a job upon graduation. Student interns are often later hired for full-time employment by the companies for which they interned.

N - Networking opportunities. Throughout your internship, you will come in contact with individuals who can be a great resource of real information about the professional world. Ask questions, and get involved as much as possible to increase your networking contacts for the future.

T - Training to acquire or polish transferable skills. Through your internship, you will be able to develop the skills that employers are looking for, add them to your resume and discuss what you can offer to a future employer when you interview for a new position. .

E - Explore and clarify career goals. An internship is one of those rare opportunities when you can actually "try out" a career before you must make a decision to commit to it.

R - Recruited to work full-time. An internship is the chance to prove yourself as a hard-working, intelligent and capable professional. If there is an entry-level position available, as an intern you are definitely in a competitive position to be considered for the spot.

N - Negotiating power. Because an internship will increase the likelihood of receiving job offers before graduation, you will have the power to select the job that fits your needs as well as negotiate salary and benefits.

Some people falsely believe that as an intern, your responsibilities are likely to consist of menial tasks. While it is true that sometimes you may be asked to perform these tasks, most internships offer significant educational and practical experience and by pitching in to help with a positive attitude, you are demonstrating that you are a team player.

Frequently Asked Questions

How many times can I get credit for an internship?

It depends; each individual academic department determines whether internship credit is repeatable. To find out, contact your department.

Can I get additional credit if I stay at the same site?

Yes, however if you are continuing your internship for more than one semester at the same internship site and would like to receive additional credit, your internship responsibilities must change in some way (work in a different department, on a different project, increase your responsibilities, etc.) This must be approved by your faculty monitor and internship coordinator.

Am I required to sign up for credit in order to do an internship?

No, you can do an internship simply for the experience.

Are internships paid or unpaid?

Many sites will pay an intern; however, it depends on the field. Business, accounting, and information technologies are more likely to pay. The experience you will gain should be one of the most important considerations in choosing sites you are interested in and will have the greatest impact on your future. Remember, in your future employer's eyes, practical experience is priceless.

Can I receive credit and be paid for an internship?

Yes.

When do I have to notify the Internship Coordinator that I am participating in a credited internship?

Fall term:	July 1
J-term:	November 15
Spring term:	December 1
Summer term:	April 1

Do I need a resume when applying for an internship?

The application process to apply for an internship is the same as applying for a full time position. You must create a professional resume, cover letter, and other documents required by the internship site.

Will there be an interview process in order to get an internship?

Yes, you are competing with other students for the same internship; therefore, the company must use the interview process to select from the pool of candidates.

What if I do not hear anything from internship sites I've applied to?

Follow up is extremely important in the search for an internship. After your resume has been sent, you should follow up via telephone, if possible, or e-mail to confirm receipt of your correspondence, express your interest in the position and inquire about when you should expect to receive a response.

Where do I find the Consent to Register form?

The consent to register form can be found on the "myElmhurst Portal" all required internship paperwork must be completed via Handshake before the "Consent to Register" form will be approved by your Faculty Advisor and the Internship Coordinator.
